3. To Create awareness about essential components of a start-up ecosystem and resources like skills, time and money.

8. Outcome of the event:

Start-up ecosystems are controlled by both external and internal factors. External factors as financial climate, big market disruptions and big companies’ transitions, control the overall structure of an ecosystem and the way things work within it. Start-up ecosystems being dynamic entities—invariably, they are initially in formation stages and once established are subject to periodic disturbances (like the financial bubbles) passing afterwards to the recovering process from some of those past disturbances.

Start-up ecosystems in similar environments but located in different parts of the world can end up doing things differently simply because they have a different entrepreneurial culture and resource pool. The introduction of non-native people's knowledge and skills can also cause substantial shifts in the ecosystem functions.
